If there is a long delay before the birth, your baby's condition will deteriorate in the womb. If you want to have a post mortem examination to try to find out why your baby died, this is less likely to provide useful information. A delay will also affect how your baby will look when he or she is born.

Fetus in fetu is a developmental abnormality in which a mass of tissue resembling a fetus forms inside the body. An early example of the phenomenon was described in 1808 by George William Young. There are two theories of origin concerning "fetus in fetu". One theory is that the mass begins as a normal fetus but becomes enveloped inside its twin. The other theory is that the mass is a highly developed teratoma. "Fetus in fetu" is estimated to occur in 1 in 500,000 live births.
